

CONTEMPORARY Business Intelligence Readiness Assessment

Don't just 'think', KNOW how your organisation will benefit from Business Intelligence

We believe that Business Intelligence is simple to explain yet universally applicable to all businesses. In essence Business Intelligence is about taking your data and delivering it to your people as timely, accurate and actionable information that they can use to benefit you and your customers.

There could be a number of reasons you are considering Business Intelligence, maybe you are considering: How you can improve reporting across your business; The best way to proceed with your data warehouse or data mart project; How to see your business' performance right now?

But before you can even begin to explore the answers to these questions you are probably asking:

- How much will a Business Intelligence solution cost?
- How long will it take to implement?
- How many people will be involved?
- How will my organisation benefit?

At CONTEMPORARY we like to keep things simple, we don't believe in hiding behind buzz words and the dreaded three letter acronym. Our people are open and honest, that's why we believe in sharing information with you and trying to simplify the often complex subject of Business Intelligence.

A CONTEMPORARY Business Intelligence Readiness Assessment will:

- Review your business requirements
- Assess any existing and review future technical requirements
- Assess business, IT and project team resources and skills
- Review proposed architecture
- Review project plan
- Perform a gap analysis of above

The result

A comprehensive report is produced that may include the following:

- Proposed scope and requirements
- Risk assessment
- Roles and responsibilities
- Project team composition and skills
- Business Intelligence strategy, approach and phases
- Technology recommendations
- Architecture approach
- Project and resource plans
