

CONTEMPORARY Coaching & Knowledge Transfer

Tap into the knowledge and experience of our Microsoft & Business Objects consultants

In certain circumstances public or corporate product training simply isn't the right solution. There may be constraints on your time or you simply need some on-the-job help and support to ensure you continue to be productive and benefit from the products you are using.

Perhaps you have attended training in the past and are looking to take it one step further through one-to-one mentoring or you require skills transfer to get quickly up to speed on a new product version.

One-to-one-coaching

CONTEMPORARY coaching is a way to tap into the knowledge and experience of our expert consultants. We work with individuals to develop their skills and identify ways they can apply their knowledge and expertise to deliver improved performance. This is a practical way to support employees after training, as part of a longer learning and development programme or to get up to speed quickly on new product releases.

One-to-one coaching allows for focused time to be spent on a particular area. Using applications such as Crystal Reports, Business Objects and Microsoft requires not only an in-depth knowledge of the product but also the experience to apply that knowledge to a variety of business situations.

CONTEMPORARY's consultants will share their knowledge with users at their desk. Users are able to utilise the skills gained instantly and with confidence in their own environment.

Benefits include:

- increased productivity
- increased awareness of applications and best practice
- creation of a self-help culture
- improved personal skill set
- ongoing support

Very popular with users, this is a perfect add-on to a traditional training course as coaching allows people to gain the most from the session by focusing on their individual needs. So whether you are simply looking to enhance your existing skills in a live environment or solve real problems with a view to completing a project against ever shortening deadlines, then one-to-one coaching is the ideal and cost effective solution.
